2015-2021: Postcolonial Displacements: Migration, Narratives and Place-Making in South Asia (funded by Leiden University AMT). This project explores the multiple ways in which migration in South Asia contributes to the imagining, questioning, subverting and reframing of territories, nations and communities. Foregrounding the contested fringes of the politically divided South Asian subcontinent across historical and contemporary socio-political contexts, the project asks: How do people in South Asia engage, resist and support the arbitrary borders that divide, define and delineate the states of the subcontinent? And how are cultural imaginations, narratives, and claim-makings shaped by histories, memories and experiences of mobility and migration?

2016-2019: Markets, Ethics and Agency: Changing Land Utilization and Social Transformation in the Uplands of Northeast India (funded by NWO & ICSSR). This research project explores the strategies employed by upland farmers of Northeast India who are deepening their engagement with markets and the state. Given the substantial commitments of the Indian state towards the Northeast and its growing importance for commercial activities such as mining, the region is rapidly developing in terms of infrastructure and connectivity. Conducting in-depth multidisciplinary and empirical research into the so far neglected agency of upland farmers and their complex and changing relationship with markets and the state, we expect to gain important new insights into how upland indigenous communities modernize.
